JOE MUNDAY,

The Great Lecturer, Will be in Louisia Again on June 10th, in College Benefit.

Joe Munday, one of the most entertaining and effective speakers on the platform to-day, delivered two lectures in Louisa last week, and will lecture here again on Thursday evening of this week at the court house. 25c. will be charged adults and 10c for children. 25 per cent. of the proceeds will be given to the Kentucky Normal College. The subject will be "Fleas." This is a lively subject and you should jump at the chance to hear it.

If you missed the two treats handed out by Mr. Munday last week just ask some one who was there about how much you lost and the reply will make you hungry enough to go this time. He has a magnificent voice, he is a fine impersonator and actor, he is a great humorist, and he has such command of pathos that he can bring tears to his eyes at will. No one can afford to miss the affair on Thursday night.

An Involuntary Dose.

Morton, the bright little son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Pickens, was in the water room of the store last Monday and while there he was attracted by a long rubber barrel hanging from a shelf. Childish curiosity led him to put the tube into his mouth and suck. How much he drew from the vessel is not known, but being frightened at the unexpected results he ran into the house and told what he had done. Then his parents became as badly scared as the little doctor. Meanwhile the boy grew very sick and, fortunately, vomited most or all of the poisonous dose. The little chap was pretty sick nearly all day but is now all right again. Oh! a well that is well.

CORNERSTONE

Of Alice Mayo Hall Laid at Paintsville With Imposing Ceremonies.

Last Tuesday was a big day in Paintsville. The occasion was the laying of the corner stone of Alice Mayo Hall, a dormitory for girls, to be used in connection with Sandy Valley Seminary.

The ceremonies were under the direction of the Kentucky-Grand Lodge officers of the Masonic Fraternity. It was the first time this ceremony has been used in the Sandy Valley and the spectators were deeply interested. The corn, wine and oil were applied along with the impressive rites of this great and ancient order of builders. A number of Knights Templar were present in full uniform, most of them being from Ashland.

It was estimated that 1,000 visitors were present. Louisa, Prestonsburg and Pikeville were well represented.

A collection was taken amounting to nearly $10,000. It was started by a check from Mrs. J. C. C. Mayo for $2500.00 and one from her husband for $500.00. This in addition to $15,000 previously given. M. W. Thomas, of Ashland, gave $1,000. John E. Buckingham contributed $1,000.

Some of the speakers who were on the program failed to arrive, but their places were admirably filled by Hon. W. S. Harkins, Rev. W. I. Canter and Edgar B. Hager.

Notwithstanding the fact that these speakers had but short notice they acquitted themselves most creditably. Rev. Darlington, of Parkersburg, took the collection.

The dormitory will be located on the hill just back of the handsome Seminary building. It will be modern in every respect.

The highest tributes were paid by speakers to Mr. and Mrs. J. C. C. Mayo, who are the founders of this educational institution.

All visitors were well cared for by the hospitable people of Paintsville and the day will long be remembered by all who attended.

KILLED

By the Bite of a Snake Was Chas. Conn, Known on Big Sandy.

In Louisville Friday night a very tragic affair resulted in the death of Chas. Conn, of Lexington, who was formerly a civil engineer employed in the Big Sandy Valley on the engineering force that built the extension of the C. & O. railroad. He was located at Prestonsburg for quite awhile. He was in Louisa about a month ago.

Following is an account of the horrible affair taken from the Louisville Times:

From the effect of a rattlesnake bite, Chas. Conn, 27 years of age, a traveling salesman for the American Law Book Company and prominent Mason, of Lexington, Ky., died a raving maniac at the Deaconess Hospital. Conn was bitten last night by a huge rattler on exhibition at the Mary Anderson Theater cigar store and all efforts to save his life were in vain.

As he lay writhing in agony on the floor, Conn begged the bystanders to amputate his arm, exclaiming, "Boys it is all up with me, don't be afraid. I won't mind the pain." The horrified spectators stood as if paralyzed and finally in his delirium the man took out his pocket knife and began to cut away the flesh from the tiny wounds, but the knife soon fell from his helpless hands.

Witnessed by scores of persons on Fourth Avenue who peered through the glass show case the weird and terrible struggle between Conn and the deadly reptile took place. Bitten three times by the monster Conn still struggled on, holding the reptile by the throat until the pain-stricken people in the store made their escape in terror.

According to the story of witnesses, Charles Conn, accompanied by a friend, Eugene Osler, a drummer for a New York firm, with whom he roomed at Rufer's Hotel, entered the store shortly after 9 o'clock, and after purchasing cigars viewed the snake which was on exhibition in a small wooden box near the cigar case. Edward Ries, a clerk in the store, who owned the snake, warned Conn to be careful of the reptile.

Conn, who was a former civil engineer and who had lived in Arizona, only laughed at the warning, saying that he was a snake charmer and that no rattler could hurt him. With these words he withdrew the reptile from its cage, and, holding it by the throat, exhibited its length to those present. The snake struggled in his clutches, and the whirl of its seven rattles frightened the audience. Conn then replaced the snake in the box and a few persons gathered and talked of the incident.

Before anyone had recovered from the first exhibition of the amateur snake charmer, he again drew the reptile from its cage and allowed it to coil about his right arm. Hardly noticing it, he began to chat with the men in the store of his experience in the West with rattlers, when suddenly the writhing object struggled from his grasp and plunged its fangs into his right hand.

With a cry of pain he twisted the snake through the air and threw it far across the room, where it alighted on the shoulders of a bystander, who shrieked in terror. Realizing what he had done Conn ran to the aid of the terror-stricken man, and then began the struggle between man and reptile. After a few seconds, which seemd hours to the terrified onlookers, Conn released the man uninjured, but was himself bitten twice in the arm by the infuriated rattler. Throwing it to the floor, he attempted to kill it, but growing weaker he swooned and leaned against the cigar stand for support. The snake for the time made its escape behind some boxes.

Conn was carried to the cafe in the basement of the building where nearly a pint of whiskey was poured down his throat. A doctor was immediately summoned and arrived in three minutes, but by this time the unfortunate man lay on a bench in a state of collapse. The poison had already permeated his system and the awful agony was apparent to every one. Weakly he raised his voice and begged the physician to do something to alleviate his pain. An automobile was brought and the man was taken to the Deaconess Hospital with breakneck speed.

At the hospital the physicians opened his veins and injected strong solutions of permanganate of potassium in an effort to neutralize the poison. Although Conn recovered complete consciousness, he became a raving maniac and had to be strapped in bed, where the combined strength of nurses and physicians was barely sufficient to keep him. The effects of the poison were awful to behold. The eyes of the unfortunate man, contracted until they looked like mere beads, while his tongue was swollen to five times its normal size and protruded from his mouth.

Gradually the struggles of the man became weaker and weaker and the physicians did all in their power to stimulate heart action, but to no avail and Conn passed away at four o'clock a. m.

Conn was prominently connected in Lexington. He leaves a wife and three children. After the removal of Conn from the cigar store, the brave among the crowd, which had collected, hunted out the vicious snake and with clubs and brooms dispatched it. The reptile was shipped to Edward Ries several days ago from the mountain section of Kentucky. It was what is known as a "diamond back," the most deadly variety of rattlesnakes.

Charles Conn was the son of F. J. Conn, superintendent of bridge construction on the Q. & C. railroad, residing at Lexington. He was the only boy of the family, and had two sisters, Mrs. J. T. Pride, wife of the well-known Lexington attorney, and Miss Pearl Conn.

ROAD DRAG

U. S. Good Roads Department Issues Important Bulletin.

One of the latest publications issued by the Office of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture treats of the split-log drag. An implement which numerous experiments have conclusively shown to be the greatest possible boon to keep earth roads smooth and passable. Because of its simplicity, its efficiency and its cheapness, both in construction and operation, it is destined to come more and more into general use. With the drag properly built and its use well understood, the maintenance of earth roads becomes a simple and inexpensive matter.

At the present time there are approximately 2,000,000 miles of earth roads in the United States. Some of the most important of these roads will eventually be improved with stone, gravel, and other materials. Many others which are equally important cannot be so improved on account of lack of funds or suitable materials, while still others will not require such treatment because of the light traffic to which they are subjected. For these reasons the majority of our roads must be maintained as earth roads for many years to come. This must be done by inexpensive methods and the split-log drag will be a powerful aid to economy in the criterion demand.

In the construction of this implement, care should be taken to make it so light that one man can lift it with ease, a light drag responding more readily to various methods of hitching than a heavy one, as well as to the shifting of the position of the operator. The best material for a split-log drag is a dry red cedar log, though elm, and walnut are excellent, and box, sycamore, soft maple, or even willow are superior to oak, hickory, or ash. The log should be between 7 and 10 feet long and from 10 to 12 inches in diameter at the butt end. It should be split carefully as near the center as possible, and the heaviest and best slab chosen for the front. In the front slab four inches from the end which is to drag in the middle of the road bore a 2-inch hole which is to receive a cross stake. At a distance of 22 inches from the other end of the front slab, locate the center for another cross stake. The hole for the middle stake will be on a line connecting and halfway between the two. Then place the back slab in position from the end which is to drag in the middle of the road measure 20 inches for the center of the cross stake and six inches from the other end locate the center of the opposite stake. The hole for the center stake should be located halfway between the two. All these holes should be carefully bored perpendicular or at right angles to the face of the split log.

If these directions are followed it will be found that when the holes of the front and back slabs are brought opposite each other, one end of the back slab will be 16 inches nearer the center of the roadway than the front one. That gives what is known as "set back." The stakes which are 20 inches long, will hold the slabs this distance apart. When the stakes have been firmly wedged into their sockets, a brace about two inches thick and 4 inches wide may be placed diagonally to them at the ditch end of the drag. A cleated board is placed between the slabs and across the stakes for the driver to stand on.

By many it is deemed best to place a strip of iron along the front face of the front slab for a cutting blade and to prevent the drag from wearing. The drag may be fastened to the doubletree by means of a trace chain. The chain should be wrapped around the left-hand or rear stake and passed over the front slab. Raising the chain at this end of the slab permits the earth to drift past the face of the drag. The other end of the chain should be passed through a hole in the opposite end of the front slab and held by a pin passed through a link.

For ordinary purposes the hitch should be made that the unloaded drag will follow the team at an angle of about 45 degrees. The team should be driven with one horse on either side of the right-hand wheel track or rut the full length of the portion to be dragged, and made to return in the same manner over the other half of the roadway. Such treatment will move the earth towards the center of the roadway and raise it gradually above the surrounding level.

The best results have been obtained by dragging roads once each way after each heavy rain. In some cases, however, one dragging every three or four weeks has been found sufficient to keep a road in good condition. When the soil is moist but not sticky the drag does its best work. As the soil in a field will bake if plowed wet, so the road will bake if the drag is used on it while wet. If the roadway is full of holes or badly rutted, the drag should be used once when the ground is soft and slushy. This is particularly applicable before a cold spell in winter, when it is possible to so prepare the surface that it will freeze smooth.

Not infrequently conditions are met which may be overcome by a slight change in the manner of hitching. Shortening the chain tends to lift the front slab and make the cutting slight, while a longer hitch causes the slab to sink more deeply into the earth and act on the principle of a plow.

If a furrow of earth is to be moved, the doubletree should be attached close to the ditch end of the drag, and the driver should stand with one foot on the extreme end of the front slab.

Conditions are so varied in different localities, however, that it is quite impossible to lay down specific rules. Certain sections of a roadway will require more attention than others, because of steep grades, wet weather springs, soil conditions exposure to sun and wind, washes, etc. There is one condition, however, in which special attention should be given. Clay roads under persistent draggings frequently become too high in the center. This may be corrected by dragging the earth towards the center of the road twice, and away from it once.

There is no question as to the economy of this road making implement, either in first cost or operation. In six counties in Kansas in 1906 the cost of maintaining ordinary earth roads, without the aid of the split-log drag, averaged $42.50 a mile. These figures were furnished by Prof. W. C. Hoard, of the University of Kansas, who secured them from official records of the counties.

Some figures furnished by F. P. Sanborn and R. H. Ashton, General Manager of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad, have revealed the wonders of this simple device. Mr. Sanborn said: "The least expense per mile per annum for split-log dragging was $1.50, the greatest a little over $6, and the average expense per mile for 5 1/2 miles a little over $3. I have lived along this road all my life and never in 40 years have I seen them freer from mud and dust, despite the fact that during the season we have experienced the extremes of weather conditions."

The testimony of Mr. Ashton is equally strong. Learning that a township in Iowa had been making an investigation of the split log drag and had been experimenting with it for a year on 28 miles of highway, he sent an agent to secure information. It was reported that although the town board paid the cost of making the drags and of hiring men to operate them, the total expense for one year averaged but $2.40 a mile, and the roads were reported to have been "like a race track the greater portion of the year."

Job Printing

Some of you are paying more for your job printing than the Big Sandy News office charges, and getting a poorer class of work and a cheaper grade of stock. It is worth your while to investigate.

RUBBER STAMPS.

Rubber stamps are a great convenience for certain purposes. They are not suitable for printing your letter heads and envelopes. Neatly printed stationery looks business-like and is cheaper, all things considered, than buying blank stock and stamping it yourself.

However, we furnish rubber stamps at 1 cent for a single line 8 inches or less in length. 30 cents for 8 lines 8 inches or less.

Difficult Breathing

Short breath, fluttering, palpitation, sinking spells are symptoms of a weak heart, struggling to do its work. It must keep the blood in circulation to carry nourishment to make flesh, bone and muscle, and remove the worn-out particles. When it cannot do this, it must have help. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure gives strength to the heart nerves and muscles, and increases the heart action.

"I am inclined to say that I am so much improved in health. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure cured me when several doctors failed. I think no other medicine could do for me what Heart Cure has done. My case was bad; had as it could be at times. I had difficulty in getting my breath, my heart beat so fast at times that I thought it impossible to live without relief; the pain was very severe in my left side, and my nerves were all unstrung; had almost given up all hope of being cured, and I am sure I would not, if I had not taken the Heart Cure. I take great pleasure in recommending Dr. Miles' Heart Cure to all who suffer with heart disease."

Announcement.

FOR CONGRESS.

Ellis E. Lawrence, of Boyd county, authorizes us to announce his candidacy for Congress from the 9th Congressional District, subject to the action of the Democratic convention.

FOR CONGRESS.

We are authorized to announce CHAS. KITCHEN, of Carter County, as a candidate for Congress from the Ninth Congressional District, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

FOR CONGRESS.

EDGAR B. HAGER, of Ashland, Boyd county, is a candidate for Congress, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

The American Tobacco Company has purchased 400,000 pounds of low-grade tobacco from the Burley Tobacco Society. They are paying high prices for the tobacco.

John M. Sigraves, of Paintsville, will, no doubt, be sent to Denver as a delegate from the Tenth district to the Democratic National Convention at Denver. He should be, at any rate, as he deserves any honor desired at the hands of the party. The mountains will appreciate the recognition of this successful and self-made young man.

The President has appointed J. Frank Taylor, postmaster at Glasgow, to the much coveted position of Surveyor of Port of Louisville. Wm. Henry Jones will get the place of postmaster at Glasgow and this will remove all opposition to Congressman James for re-nomination. Mr. Langley was urging Henry Howes of Paintsville, for Surveyor, and Bennett was after the place for Sam Pugh.

For several months the Paintsville Herald has been carrying announcements for a large number of Johnson county Republicans who are running for county offices to be voted for in November, 1908. The list now comprises forty-three sprinters. Already they have begun to pant for breath, or for the end of the race. They have set up a howl for an early primary, but the State Chairman writes that under the party rules they will have to trot along until the November election, 1908.

We direct special attention to an article published in this issue on the road drag. The bulletin was issued by the U. S. Government authorities and is worth careful perusal of all citizens of this part of Kentucky and West Virginia. If put into intelligent use of this simple, inexpensive contrivance known as the split-log drag will revolutionize the dirt roads of this country. We have been reading for some time about this implement and its great success. If our officials would put some pair as they do in Boyd county, we would get along infinitely better. Let all who feel an interest in this most important matter of good roads preserve this article on the split-log drag.

FAMILY CASES.

This Information May be of Value to Many a Mother in Louisa.

When here is added to the many cares inseparable from the rearing of children that affliction of weakness of the kidneys and auxiliary organs, the mother's lot is far from a happy one. This condition can be quickly changed and absolutely cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. When this is known the mother's burden will be lighter and her home happier.

Mrs. T. V. Heston, living in Louisa, Ky., says: "I sincerely trust my testimonial may be seen by some other sufferer of weakened kidneys. My daughter was greatly annoyed from the improper action of these organs. She complained of a dull aching across her back, and she was unable to retain the kidney secretions. She procured Doan's Kidney Pills and it required but the use of one box to give her entire relief and she has since been in the best of health."

A Hair Dressing

Nearly every one likes a fine hair dressing. Something to make the hair more manageable; to keep it from being too rough, or from splitting at the ends. Something, too, that will feed the hair at the same time, a regular hair-food. Well-fed hair will be strong, and will remain where it belongs—on the head, not on the comb!

STANLEY AND DALZELL

(By Savoyard.)

Some three or four weeks ago the agricultural appropriation bill was under consideration in committee of the whole in the house of representatives, and on March 24, Mr. Stanley of Kentucky got the floor and proceeded to reply to a very able speech by Mr. Dalzell, some time earlier, in which the accomplished statesman from Pennsylvania undertook to contrast Alexander Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson, much to the disparagement of the latter, and much to the credit of the former.

Mr. Dalzell got his history of the New England school—the Harvard set—Henry Adams, Henry Cabot Lodge, Theodore Roosevelt, and so on, not to forget William E. Oatis and Edward E. Ellis, and it made the sedate thinker from Pittsburg, ordinarily so wary and so accurate, a very credulous person. We see the somewhat similar effect when the brilliant mind of Gertrude Atherton contemplates Hamilton and Jefferson through the same historic spec.

Owsley Stanley's reply to Dalzell was crushing and conclusive. He painted the two men, Hamilton and Jefferson, precisely as they were, and placed them precisely where authentic history will put them—the Virginian the wisest of political philosophers; the West Indian the most brilliant of political adventurers. Many of Stanley's political friends tried to dissuade him from the encounter. They did not know much about Hamilton and Jefferson, but they knew a deal of John Dalzell, whose conclusions they had never embraced, but whose statements of facts they had never challenged.

Stanley did not dare to enter the lists without being armed cap-a-pie, and he spent a week of almost ceaseless investigation night and day. He searched fifty volumes and drew from manuscripts in the national library and the state department. When he began the Democrats were apprehensive and the Republicans confident. A few minutes the Democrats were sanguine and the Republicans confused. Both were astonished. Never before in more than 100 years of history-making had the American congress seen the two great fathers of American politics as they were and as they will be estimated by the future Gibbon or Hume.

Alexander Hamilton was born a British subject, in the insignificant island of Nevis, in the West Indies. His father was a Scotchman and his mother a French woman. In his earliest youth he gave earnest of the splendid genius of which nature had endowed him. Ere he was twenty he was the first political controversialist in the colony of New York, whether with tongue or pen. His motto might have been:

"Why, then, the world's mine oyster, Which I with mind will open."

As a political writer he was greater than Paine and little inferior to Burke. As an orator he was, perhaps, second to Henry only of the Revolutionary generation. Had he gone to London he would have been capable of filling a bigger place in English annals than the younger Pitt. Had he gone to France and escaped the Terror he might have been second to Napoleon Bonaparte alone, an honest Talleyrand, a more fortunate Massena.

Instead, Hamilton came to America and assumed the role of Hampden. He opposed Lord North, not for the tax he levied so much as the principle it involved. It was a little bit of a tax, a great piece of folly on the part of the ministry, though not oppressive; but if allowed to be a precedent, it was in the power of the crown to make serfs of the colonists. Hamilton entered the army and became the secretary of the commander-in-chief, and in the field he was as daring as he was able in the forum. That arch-flatterer and matchless scoundrel, Talleyrand, declared that Hamilton was greater than Napoleon or Fox, which is all bush; but Hamilton's eulogists are absurd enough to take what the unscrupulous French miscreant said for his real opinion. Well might the shade of Hamilton pray to be delivered from American history as she is writ.

Hamilton is actually held up as the father of the constitution, when the one thing for which he had more contempt than for that instrument was the Articles of Confederation which it supplanted. As for patriotism—the real stuff, not the brand described by Walpole—Hamilton had none, and it was impossible for him to have any, having expatriated himself at the age of sixteen years. The patriotism that springs from the heart and fills the soul is not a plant that can be carried from clime to clime. The patriot is made of the boy that plays around the spring, gambols in the orchard, roclines in the shade of trees in happy boyhood. It is "catching" in the schoolroom as it is imparted from urchin to urchin, and it is all over and around the playground. Washington and Henry, Adams and Putnam, Rutledge and Marion, were patriots. So were old George Clinton and Philip Schuyler. These were "Native and to the manor born." But Hamilton, the adventurer, was not, and could not be, moved by the sentiments that were natural to these men.

Hamilton made one great speech in the constitutional convention, and then he disappears; but the romancers—some of whom makes him a compound of Aristides, Cincinnatus and Scipio Africanus—say that Hamilton wrought more effectively for the constitution in the background. True, his writings secured the adoption of the constitution after Madison, Elsworth, Sherman and company had made it; but it was not that he believed in the constitution or loved it, but that he thought it better than the articles of confederation, because it lodged more power in the federal establishment.

As the secretary of the treasury in Washington's cabinet he was at his greatest. He had the gift of organization, and he brought order out of chaos; but he had too much mental integrity or mental pride to pretend that the protective system was not a hardship on the people. And Mr. Stanley quoted from him some language that sounds marvellously Democratic on the tariff question.

Mr. Dalzell made this declaration: "He certainly is a bold man who, in the face of history, contends today that the permanent policies which have entered into the statutes and character of our nation are not the policies dictated by Hamilton and his followers."

And to that Mr. Stanley retorted: "Now, my temerity may argue more than my judgment, but I deny it. There never was a deduction more absolutely unfounded hurled defiantly into the teeth of history."

"What were the policies of Alexander Hamilton?"

"He would have had a president for life—he is elected every four years."

"He would have senators during good behavior—they serve a fixed and definite term of six years."

"He would have the executive armed with an absolute veto—you can by two-thirds majority annul that veto."

"He would have massed free speech—Jefferson opened the deliberations of this house to the naked view and candid criticism of a free and untrammelled press."

"He defended the alien and sedition laws—they are repealed. He founded a national bank—it is demolished. All his cherished and vaunted schemes are gone glimmering in the dream of things that were, exploded fallacies, they litter the debris of history."

"I challenge the gentleman from Pennsylvania to give me one single solitary policy of Hamilton which was ever crystallized into law that lived. His policies are gone, his followers are dead. There are only left his apologists and his eulogists."

If Jefferson had not come back from France when he did it is more than possible that the colonies would have sought the protection of England, and that would have resulted in a return of allegiance to the British flag. When the French revolution came it was hailed with approval by the best of the intellectual world, including Edmund Burke, Charles James Fox, Thomas Jefferson and Thomas Paine. It was the revolt of liberty against despotism, the long-delayed triumph of light over darkness; but in the compensations of human affairs the atrocities of the Terror were commensurate with the centuries of enormities that privilege had perpetuated in France, and there was a revulsion of public opinion. Even Burke became the most formidable of all the adversaries of the revolution he had applauded. Hamilton agreed with Burke, and so did a far greater than Hamilton—even George Washington.

There was actual war between France and the United States, and numerous battles fought on the water between the two powers. Washington was again appointed commander-in-chief, and chose Hamilton as his chief lieutenant. England and France were in a death grapple. Had war been declared and waged for a year it is morally certain that British rule would have been re-established in our country. Jefferson prevented that war, and by that act he saved the Union.

Mr. Dalzell had the temerity to challenge the conduct of Jefferson in the acquisition of Louisiana and asserted that the thing was accomplished in spite of Jefferson. And now it was that the Lord delivered the accomplished Pennsylvanian into the hands of the brilliant Kentuckian. Stephen A. Douglas, in reply to Seward, did not tower above his adversary more giganticly than did Stanley over Dalzell. It was this part of the speech that showed what a genius for research is possessed by the gifted orator from the Second Kentucky district. It is too long to quote. One must read it entirely to get a proper conception of it. It is not at all remarkable that Mr. Dalzell was content to allow that the debate is a closed incident. Every intelligent onlooker in our political Vienna should read Dalzell's speech and then read Stanley's reply.

When Stanley came to discuss the duel between Burr and Hamilton he put an entirely new phase on the controversy. Hamilton was a believer in the code. He was on the field as Laurens' second in the duel with General Charles Lee. He sought a quarrel with John Adams that could have been settled, according to his ideas of personal honor, only on the field. He challenged James Monroe, and would have fought him if Aaron Burr had not lent his good offices and composed the difference without a hostile meeting. On the field of Weehawken he delayed the giving of the "word" till he could wipe his glasses to make his vision clearer, and yet we are told that his intention was to fire in the air. For years he had assailed Burr, and for years Burr held his peace. Hamilton's eulogists tell us that he accepted Burr's call to the field because the standards of those days made it imperative that he should do so. To that Stanley made this inexorable retort:

"I agree that we should not judge the duelist of that day by the standard of this. But there is no logic by which you can pardon the acceptor of a challenge and condemn the sender. By that barbarous code he who was charged with an infamous offense could not clear his skirts by proving its falsity. To prove the charge false and to fail to resent it was to aggravate the imputation of cowardice, in that day more odious than vice or crime. The same perverted public opinion which necessitated the acceptance forced the sending of a challenge."

Could a retort be more conclusive? If Hamilton was a martyr of the barbarous code when he accepted, it necessarily follows that Burr was also a martyr when it required him to send the challenge.

Those fond of the brilliant, the ornate, the exuberant, the splendid, can find it in these passages with which Stanley closed his speech:

"For centuries neither the telescope of the astronomer nor the researches of science could solve the mystery of that misty night, that glimmering gossamer encircling the brow of night; at last the spectrum revealed in this nebula unborn worlds, held in a shimmering gaseous, revolving masses of incandescent gas, cooling through the passing cycles of time, growing denser without, shrinking within, forming smoky concentric circles, a whirling luminous fog, congealing into molten rings drawn by their own gravity into rude globes, and these spinning spheres shaped by the plastic hand of Divinity like clay upon a potter's wheel, into planets and their satellites, new solar systems, swinging for the first time into their orbits in the trackless, fathomless depths above. Thus God peoples the heavens with radiant worlds."

"I have fancied that those daring bands of exiles, forgotten by one world and lost in the dark wilds of another, living and dying in ignorance of the mighty destiny of their children's children, conscious only that they were free—I have fancied that He, 'with whom a thousand years are as a day or a watch in the night when it is passed,' saw an unborn and pulsant nation through all the mists of misery, persecution and death, through which succeeding generations passed, first to independence, then to the mastery of the land and sea."

"In the vast womb of the wilderness the colonies took form, though varying in their orbits and splendor, but they differed only 'as one star differs from another star in glory.' In the hour of destiny each found its own place about the great central power, to which, like the planets, they were eternally bound, yet forever separate. The fathers, I declare to you, heard the voice of God when they covered this continent with states, even as the heavens are bespangled with stars."

"The same peril awaits the star and the state. The state discovered from her sisters is lost, even as a planet wrenched from its moorings, comet-like, becomes the wandering vagrant of the skies."

"Either, drawn by the compelling gravity of a central force into its mighty vortex, is annihilated by the power which should have been the source of light and life."

"From the chaos of disunion and the wreck of centralization may he who ordained long preserve this constellation of states."

"Let no new Hamilton arise to disturb or destroy their exquisite balance—harmonious, distinct, indissoluble, they shall remain eternal as the revolving stars."

For years and years the dogmatism of Hamilton's eulogists has dominated American public thought. I only wish that Owsley Stanley would take time to elaborate this splendid speech of his and offer it to some leading magazine. It would carry confusion into every Hamilton camp, and shake the walls of Harvard College themselves.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a humming sound or imperfect hearing, and when this is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by druggists. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Watch Repairing.

If your watch is worth repairing at all it should be done right. The prices charged by competent and bold workmen are about the same. Often the skilled watchmaker will charge less, because he can tell what is to be done and is not making a wild guess. More watches are ruined by fellows who are trying to learn this delicate and scientific trade by practicing on the public's timepieces than ever wear out or are broken in any other way.

C. A. Benn at Conley's store, served a full apprenticeship at the trade and has had 42 years of experience. He also does all kinds of jewelry repairing and engraving. All work guaranteed by a good guarantee.

Clothes of Excellence; Positively;

One Trial is Sufficient Proof:

The best clothes made—sounds better when spoken by a customer than by us. However, we leave it to them and they do say it. Would they say this if they didn't believe it?

People have gained sufficient proof by one or by dozens of trials to satisfy them that Northcott clothes never disappoint.

Northcott's determination (since the days of the 80's, when he began) to give only good quality and makeup is still remembered by every man who has given Northcott Clothes a trial. The styles were never snappier and better all 'round than this season.

A collection great enough to catch even one of the ordinary tastes. Start at $15 and go on up to $35. At every price above $15 you'll have good variety.
